BUSINESS DEMOGRAPHY

The net balance between establishments that started up and those that ceased their activities was 4,601, 8,403 less than in 2007. In terms of net job creation, this meant an increase of 8,656 people in employment, due to the greater employment contribution by the new establishments compared to the loss of the ones that closed. Among those establishments that carried on with their activities, there was also an increase in employment of 14,453 people. As an overall result, economic activity meant the net creation of 23,109 jobs.

The greatest rotation was seen among establishments legally created with the status of individual ownership, generating 58.9% of new openings and 66.8% of closures. The overall balance of this type, due to new openings, showed an increase of 1,451 establishments and 2,554 jobs, which outweighed the losses due to closures or transformations to different types of legal ownership.

In keeping with the pattern of recent years, Public Limited Companies (Sociedades limitadas) showed a positive global balance in 2008 of 2,628 establishments and a net increase of 18,474 jobs. This meant that they reached a figure of 279,755 jobs for the year, 29.7% of the total. In turn, establishments belonging to Private Limited Companies (Sociedades anónimas) reduced in number by 173 units and there was also a reduction in their net employment balance, which fell by 1,334 jobs. With these results, Public Limited Companies surpassed Private Limited Companies in terms of employment for the first time in the Basque business structure.

If we analyse demography by activity, the most outstanding branches were Construction, with 27.6% of all openings and 24.1% of all closures, and Banking, insurance and business services, with 27.0% of openings and 20.5% of closures, and Trade and repairs with 18.1% of openings and 23.2% of closures.

In terms of employment, the greatest contribution was in the Banking, insurance and business services sector, which provided 47.4% of all new employment. This contribution was also significantly higher than its specific weight in sectors overall would suggest (17.1%). Second came the Other service activities sector, with a net contribution of 24.7%, and the Construction sector, with 17.8%.

As for the size of the establishment, the most dynamic stratum, as is usually the case, was that of 2 or less employees. It alone accounted for 87.4% of all openings and 89.0% of all closures. In addition, this type of establishment was also very dynamic in terms of overall employment creation, contributing 5.596 net jobs, chiefly due to the high amount of employment by establishments that opened. However, the stratum of 20 to 49 employees was the most dynamic in terms of overall employment creation, contributing 6,976 net jobs.
